

AIAA Greater Huntsville Section Attends Artemis on the Square

By Tracie Prater

Members of the AIAA Greater Huntsville Section attended Artemis on the Square, a celebration of NASA's Artemis program in downtown Huntsville on Saturday, November 6th. The community event was organized by NASA and Downtown Huntsville, Inc. with sponsorship from Teledyne Brown Engineering. The square featured exhibits showcasing several elements of Artemis, including the Space Launch System, Orion Crew Capsule, the Human Landing System, and Lunar Gateway. Many companies with a local presence who support the Artemis program also had booths at the event. Attendees were encouraged to dress like astronauts and an attempt was made to break the world record for most people dressed as astronauts in a single location. There were also numerous STEM activities for children in attendance. AIAA Greater Huntsville members attending the event gathered afterward to take a photo in front of an inflatable version of the Space Launch System rocket.
